Abstract (en)

[origin: WO2008125678A1] The present invention relates to a device (10) for picking goods (1) of any kind, comprising a housing (11) for attaching a picking list (40) that contains diverse order information (43) disposed in lines (41) and columns (42). According to the invention, each line (41) in the housing is associated to at least one controllable optical display element (21, 22, 23). A line pending to be picked (41) or lines (41) that are already picked can be optically marked in an advantageous manner by means of the at least one display element (21, 22, 23). Although the inventive device (10) resorts to the use of non-electronic and thus conventional picking lists (40), it offers a display quality that is only comparable to that of electronic visual display units while, at the same time, being significantly more cost-effectively in terms of purchase, maintenance and service than visual display units or other solutions known in prior art.
