Abstract (en)
[origin: EP2250923A1] A cylindrical cosmetic container with an inner cap inside a cap (5) fit outside an upper end of a container body uses a first motion resistance at a halfway covering posture to an immediately preceding covering posture and a second motion resistance from the immediately preceding covering posture to a fully cover posture while the container body is covered with the cap (5), in which the inner cap includes a protrusion (7f) to deform toward an outer diameter side while applying the first motion resistance by being pressed into sliding contact with an extending upper end (4c) of the container body and a projection (7d) projecting from an outer circumferential surface for applying the second motion resistance greater than the first motion resistance when a convex rib (4b) moves over the projection (7d).
