Abstract (en)

[origin: WO2009125134A1] The invention relates to a bag (1), intended to contain a pulverulent product, having a wall (2) of tubular general shape defining a pocket, and first and second ends (3, 4), at least one (3) of the ends having flaps which are folded and pasted with glue so as to close the corresponding end (3), the bag (1) additionally having a band (11), made of a tear-resistant material and comprising a handle (12), glued onto the end (3) of the bag so as to cover the flaps. The flaps (6, 7) have a non-pasted portion (8) designed to make them easier to separate, either manually by a user or under the effect of the weight of the pulverulent product when the bag is tilted by the user, and thus form an opening as they are deployed, the band (11) having a non-pasted region (17) which is positioned to face the non-pasted portion (8) of the flaps (6, 7).
