Abstract (en)

[origin: WO2009138077A1] The apparatus for irritating persons or crowds of people comprises devices which generate irritating signals. A first irritating device is provided which generates repeated first irritating signals at a rate of more than three signals per second (3/s). Preferably, a second irritating device is provided which generates a single second irritating signal at the beginning of or shortly before the first irritating signals or repeatedly generates second irritating signals at a rate that is significantly lower than the rate of the first irritating signals. Preferably, the first irritating signals are optical flashes of light while the second irritating signals are bang-type acoustic signals.
