Abstract (en)

[origin: WO2010025783A1] The invention relates to protective clothing for protecting against cold, heat, rain, and/or wind, which can be put on over the already worn clothing, wherein the protective clothing is made from a laminate, which comprises a layer of a substantially water-impermeable material which is coated on one side with a material through which an air cushion can be created and on the other side with a material which reflects thermal radiation. The invention further relates to a method for producing protective clothing packaged for shipping.
