Abstract (en)
[origin: WO2011023376A1] The invention relates to a coating-material container, in particular paint can, wherein the container has a device (1) which, during use, and with appropriate conditioning, accommodates an application tool (2), in particular a brush. The device has a strip-sleeve-like guide element (4) and a strip-like accommodating element (5). The accommodating element, for use, is pushed upwards in the guide element, beyond the periphery of the coating-material container, in order to hold an application tool (2).
