Abstract (en)

[origin: EP2484604A1] A package (1) for preserving food products and preparing them for consumption comprises: a first container (2) containing a first food product; a second container (3) containing a second food product, the first and second containers being coupled to each other; a separator sheet (4) interposed between the containers (2, 3) for keeping the food products housed in the containers separate in a preservation operating configuration. The separator sheet (4) is shaped in such a way that it breaks under the action of the pressure applied by steam which develops from at least one of the food products during a food product heating step to prepare them for consumption, consequently, following breakage of the separator sheet, the first food product making contact with the second food product. A method for preparing food products for consumption.
