Abstract (en)
A cosmetic face (1) mask is formed by cutting a nonwoven fabric sheet to approximately the shape of a circle and a size covering approximately the entire face and cutting openings (4,5) corresponding to the eyes and mouth, which is characterized in that the nonwoven fabric is stretchable in one direction and the sheet is cut in such a way that the direction in which the cosmetic face mask exhibits its stretchability corresponds to the lateral direction of the face, and also that perforation-like lines (14) are formed in the vertical direction in a trapezoidal area (11) surrounded by lines connecting the bases of the nose wings and bases of the eyes, as well as in a small trapezoidal area (12) formed above this area corresponding to the concave area below the center between the eyebrows, with a horizontal cut (9) made that connects the bases of the nose wings.
