Abstract (en)
[origin: EP2500892A1] A device for displaying information to a consumer is provided. The device comprises a display member rotatably mounted to a support member. A first display surface on the display member is viewable in a first direction when the display member is in a first position, but is not viewable when the display member is in a second position. The display member is biased towards the second position but can be retained in the first position by the presence of one or more products in a product area. Accordingly, the first display surface, which may provide product information, is viewable to a consumer only when products are present.
