Abstract (en)

[origin: EP2527120A1] A plant for production of a construction material comprises at least two hoppers (2), each containing a respective component element (3) of the construction material, such as concrete, and a mixing tank (5), inside of which the component elements (3) are mixed together so as to form the construction material. The mixing tank (5) is slidingly mobile below the hoppers (2), so as to receive from each one of them a determined quantity, batched and weighed, of the relative component element (3) stored therein. During its movement, the mixing tank works the elements so as to produce the construction material.
