Abstract (en)
The present invention relates to a foldable bookstand, and more particularly, to a foldable bookstand formed by a support frame having an extensible module as a basic unit and in which the centers of crossed rods are hinged together such that the rods can be opened into an X-shaped and folded into the shape of an straight line. The extensible modules are coupled together in a horizontal direction so as to form an extensible frame. The support frame can be opened when a user uses the bookstand, and folded so as to be conveniently stored and carried after use.
