Abstract (en)

[origin: US2012159530A1] Enhanced parent control may be provided. In various embodiments, a consumer device may receive a plurality of elementary streams. The consumer device may comprise a decoder capable of extracting and decoding content advisory information directly from the elementary streams. The decoded content advisory information may be compared to user-determined parental control settings. The plurality of elementary streams may then be filtered individually such that a portion less than the entirety of a program contained in the elementary streams is not presented or replaced.
