Abstract (en)

[origin: WO2013064224A1] Cigarette packages, particularly flip-top box designs are furnished with special exterior structures that facilitate handling the box, in particular holding it. Holes (31) formed by stamping, which manifest themselves as recesses in the continuous edges having a rectangular cross-section, are formed in the area of the upright edges (13) and the transverse edges (14) of the packages. Additionally or alternatively, structured surfaces can be formed in the areas of package walls.
