Abstract (en)

[origin: EP2775068A1] The device (1) has a first run (3) arranged under two tiles. A tile joint is located between the tiles. A latch or rod-shaped connector (6) is connected with the first run. A second run (4) comprises a passage opening that is plug-on or attached with the connector and protrudes with an idle end region from the passage opening. The second run is lockable for clamping the tile between an arrest device and the first run against taking from connector off. The connector comprises a holding element with an idle end region, at which a finger of the human hand is hooked.
