Abstract (en)

The invention relates to a substantially rectangular, elongate piece of roof covering, comprising at least one layer of material which is water-impermeable and to some extent flexible and fastening means arranged on the underside of the layer for the purpose of connecting the piece of roof covering to a substantially horizontally extending roof which is to be covered watertightly and which is provided with a structure engaging on the fastening means, wherein the fastening means comprise at least one strip of fastening material which extends in the lengthwise direction of the piece of roof covering and the width of the at least one strip is less than 75% of the width of the piece of roof covering. Since the strip of fastening material extends over only a part of the surface, the remaining pieces of roof covering can be easily fastened watertightly to the underlying surface.
