Abstract (en)
The present invention relates to a packaging tray for eggs comprising two half-trays (1) made of molded pulp attached through a linkage (2) comprising a perforation, the tray comprising at least one pair of projections (5) made of molded pulp separated from one another and located in a facing manner in the linkage (2), each projection (5) of the pair being located in a half-tray (1), such that when the half-trays (1) are bent along the linkage (2), contact occurs between the upper ends (5') of the projections (5), which aids in a clean and easy separation of the half-trays, in addition to preventing them from being bent too much when they are stacked in the separation machine.
