Abstract (en)
The invention relates to a disposable hand cover (washcloth) comprising overlaid first and second layers that are sealed along an edge contour apart from an entrance opening, wherein the layers are further sealed along internal contours that extend within the edge contour and can be disrupted by the force of a hand inserted in the cover. The invention further relates to a method for manufacturing the disposable hand cover (washcloth). The disposable hand cover covers the hand substantially completely, provides a good fit to any size of hand with a reduced risk of slipping off the hand during use, and minimizes waste during production of the hand cover.
