Abstract (en)
[origin: EP2995866A1] A heating cooker is provided that includes an operation position detecting means one-dimensionally disposed and detecting a position operated by a user's finger, and a first setting level displaying means displaying a setting level of one or more setting parameters including at least heating power. When the operation position detecting means is operated first at start of heating, the heating cooker displays on the first setting level displaying means a setting level of the setting parameter uniquely determined depending on an operated position of the operation position detecting means. When the operation position detecting means is operated after start of heating, the heating cooker changes the setting level of the setting parameter displayed on the first setting level displaying means depending on a movement distance and a movement direction of sliding of the finger along the operation position detecting means regardless of the setting level determined in the operation position detecting means at the time of a first operation at start of heating.
