Abstract (en)
[origin: US2016309910A1] A child support device such as a high chair for receiving a child and having a child tray designed to hold feeding items. The support device also includes an auxiliary tray located such that the child cannot see or reach the items located on the tray. For example, the caregiver can use the auxiliary tray for food preparation, or to hold personal items safely away from the child. The auxiliary tray can be retracted into a storage position as desired.
