Abstract (en)
[origin: WO2015170013A1] The invention relates to a diving mask (10) comprising: a visor (18) attached to a frame (12); a flexible shell having a wall that defines a top vision chamber and a bottom chamber for breathing; and a snorkel (20) having an inhaled-air inlet channel and at least one exhaled-air outlet channel. Said snorkel extends away from the top portion of the frame. The inhaled-air inlet channel leads into the top chamber while the first exhaled-air outlet channel is in communication with the bottom chamber. According to the invention, the frame is rigid, and at least one first inner duct for the exhaled air is provided in the frame (12). Said first inner duct has a top end, leading into the exhaled-air outlet channel, and a bottom end that is in fluid communication with the bottom chamber.
