Abstract (en)

[origin: US2017227236A1] A hot plate has a hot-plate body from metal, having an upper side and a lower side. At least one heating element is disposed on the lower side of the hot-plate body. The upper side of the hot-plate body is configured so as to be flat, for setting up a cooking vessel to be heated. The upper side of the hot-plate body in an external region has an encircling planar region which lies in a plane, or which forms a plane, respectively, wherein the upper side, radially within the planar region, has at least one internal region which is concavely depressed, which in relation to the planar region is depressed by between 0.05 mm and 1 mm.
