Abstract (en)

[origin: WO2016124307A1] The invention relates to an image display device (1), in particular for forming an image wall comprising numerous adjacent image display devices, having a device housing (2), in particular with electronics components for operating the image display device (1), and having an image module, in particular an LED image module, which is arranged on the front face of the device housing (2) and is connected to the device housing (2) by at least one first screw connection, so that the image module can be replaced by releasing the first screw connection between the device housing (2) and the image module (3). The invention provides that the first screw connection between the image module and the device housing (2) which is situated behind it is accessible from the front face, so that the image module can be replaced without work being required at the rear face or the sides of the image display device (1).
