Abstract (en)

[origin: WO2016151202A1] An invention relates to picking and delivery of products and it especially relates to manners to reduce manual work. The invention concerns a cart (301) for temporary storage of products, the cart comprising a frame (303) with repositories, wheels (302), and a displacer (306) comprising nested slides for moving a first repository (304) with respect to a second repository (305). The cart (301) is configured to a picking usage so that the displacer (306) has an open position in which products can be placed into the first repository (304) from one side of the cart (301) and into the second repository (305) from the opposite side. The same cart (301) is further configured to a delivery usage so that the displacer (306) has a closed position for the delivery usage and a fastener is configured to keep the displacer (306) in the closed position in a delivery vehicle when a centrifugal force effects on the displacer and aims to move the displacer away from the closed position. In the delivery vehicle the first repository (304) locates on top of the second repository (305) in order to narrow a space between the side (308) and the opposite side (309).
