Abstract (en)

[origin: WO2016155881A1] According to the present invention, in addition to a conventionally known list (71) of application identifiers (72) on a mobile end device (10), which identify transaction applications selectable on a terminal (100) side, a second list (75) of application identifiers (76; 77) is provided on the mobile end device (10) which identify installation applications selectable on the terminal (100) side. By means of installation applications of this type, which differentiate each assigned execution environment for executing the transaction application with respect to an installation application, a subsequent installation of a transaction application not yet selectable on the end device (10) is enabled.
