Abstract (en)

[origin: EP3364376A1] One object is to add an amount of counterfeit money found during a transaction in a deposited amount as needed. A money handling system that handles money includes a money depositing unit that receives money for a money depositing process; a recognition unit that recognizes a denomination and authenticity of each of the money received by the money depositing unit; and a control unit that sums an amount of money recognized by the recognition unit as counterfeit or suspected of being counterfeit in a deposited amount and performs the money depositing process.
