Abstract (en)
[origin: EP3597555A1] The present invention relates to a handle for handling stackable containers that can be vertically stacked. More particularly, said handle is accessible when the containers are stacked and the neck to which the handle is fixed is housed entirely under the container located immediately thereabove in the stack, and therefore concealed in a cavity arranged in the lower base of said container arranged thereabove. This invention also relates to a container with a vertically stackable configuration comprising a handle that allows access to the neck of said container when stacked under another container without having to modify the configuration of the container so as to allow access to the handle from outside the stack.
