Abstract (en)
A pill dispensing device for dispensing a pill into the mouth of a user is disclosed. The pill dispensing device comprises a circumferential portion extending along an outer periphery of the device, the circumferential portion is configured to circumferentially engage an opening of a drinking container. The pill dispensing device comprises an annular brim extending along a radial direction from the outer periphery towards a center portion of the device, the center portion being arranged to overlap a midpoint of the opening of the drinking container. The annular brim comprises a grid configured to support said pill and allow the passing of a fluid through apertures thereof from the drinking container into the mouth of the user. The center portion comprises a fluid opening having a larger opening cross-section than said apertures.
