Abstract (en)

[origin: US2021298454A1] The invention proposes a refill intended to be removably mounted on an actuation base and configured to receive a cosmetic product. The refill includes at least one means for blocking in rotation designed to link in rotation the refill and the base and at least one recognition element, called first recognition element, arranged so as to form a predefined identification pattern configured to engage with a means for identifying the actuation base so as to enable the mounting of the refill on the actuation base and to allow an input and/or an output of the cosmetic product.
