Abstract (en)

[origin: CN115227015A] A hairdressing appliance comprises a main body (1). The body comprises a handle (11) extending longitudinally along a first axis (P-P'), and an attachment (2) for contacting the hair, the attachment extending longitudinally along a second axis (A-A'), movable between at least two functional positions: a first position in which the second axis and the first axis form a flat angle, a second position in which the second axis and the first axis form a flat angle, and a third position in which the attachment (2) contacts the hair. Wherein an angle different from a flat angle is formed between the second axis and the first axis, the first and second positions being stable and defined by the design, the body comprising a hinge (12) comprising a first portion (121) integral with the handle and a second portion (122) movable between the first and second positions, the second part includes a locking device movable between a free position allowing the attachment to move between the first and second positions and a locked position locking the attachment in one of the first or second positions selected by the user.
