Abstract (en)

There is described a support bracket for apparatuses, in particular air-conditioning installation units, comprising a first and a second bracket portion (2, 3) which are provided for anchoring the bracket to the wall and for supporting and fixing the apparatus to the bracket, respectively, and securing means (5) between the first and second bracket portions (2, 3) in order to mutually secure the portions in an operative condition, in which they take up an L-shaped configuration which is suitable for supporting the apparatus, the securing means (5) comprising, at an axial end (3b) of the second bracket portion (3), a tubular through-cavity (9) having a cross-section with a closed, polygonal peripheral profile, which is configured to be engaged, with a substantially positive-locking connection, by a corresponding end portion (10) of the first bracket portion (2), the relative coupling movement being carried out in the longitudinal development direction (Y) of the first bracket portion (2), and at least one frame element (11) which projects from the end portion (10) of the first bracket portion (2), transversely relative to the longitudinal direction (Y), and against which the axial end (3b) of the second bracket portion (3) is intended to abut in the operative condition.
