(54) Network marketing game

(57) The present invention is described as a network marketing game which, by reason of its novel characteristics, provides by means of cards the principles of the business and questions to test the participants' knowledge. The main goal of the game is to aid as a support tool for the network marketing training system, not only by reproducing the actual situations experienced within the network marketing, but also instructing and teaching the principles of this business. The present invention consists of a game that reproduces all actual situations experienced by a distributor in the Network Marketing. Showing the plan, following the training system, attending the conventions and sponsoring new distributors are only some of the situations for the participants of this game. The different levels of the Network Marketing are also presented in the game, according to the sponsorships and the number of point cards of each participant.
