(54) Information recording apparatus, imaging device, information-recording controlling method, and computer program

(57) An information recording apparatus for recording data on an information recording medium includes a logical-format-image manager configured to generate logical-format-image data; a logical-format-image storage unit configured to store the logical-format-image data generated by the logical-format-image manager; and a recording controller configured to exercise control so that the logical-format-image data stored in the logical-format-image storage unit is recorded on an information recording medium during periods of suspension of recording of user data on the information recording medium, the periods of suspension being provided intermittently on the basis of an amount of user data stored in a buffer for storing user data.
